

Do the Old Gain at the Expense of the Young?

An Economic View of Social Security, Medicare, and the Government Budget

Free workshop hosted by the Michigan Intergenerational Network:
Tuesday, July 30, 2013, 9:30am to 11:00am
Livonia Civic Center Library, Rooms A&B
32777 Five Mile Road, Livonia, MI 48154

The Social Security and Medicare programs are often portrayed as a cause of the government's deficit and a "burden on our grandchildren." Come listen and find out the facts as Jim Luke, Professor of Economics and author of the blog Econproph.com, explains in simple language the economics of intergenerational transfer programs, how they benefit all generations, and their realistic prospects.

Contact: Kay Brown for details
kaynana@wowway.com, 586-468-8118
www.miintergen.org

The mission of the Michigan Intergenerational Network is to promote intergenerational understanding through education, consultation, and information dissemination.

